LEARN TO KEEP HOUSE.

Be thrifty, golden-haired queens, fair queens,
Those in your twenties and some in your teens,
Seeking accomplishments worthy your aim,
Striving for learning, thirsting for fame;
Taking such pains with the style of your hair,
Keeping your Lily complexion so fair;
Miss not this item in all your gay lives,
Learn to keep house, you may one day be wives.

Learn to keep house.

Now your Adonis loves sweet moonlight walks,
Hand clasp, and kisses, and nice little talks,
Then, as plain Charley with burden of care,
He must subsist on more nourishing fare.
He will come home at the set of the sun.
Heart sick and weary, his working day done,
Thence let his slippered feet ne'er wish to roam,
Learn to keep house and you'll keep him at home.

Learn to keep house.

First in his eyes will be children and wife,
Joy of his joy and life of his life,
Next to his dwelling, his table, his meals,
Shrink not at what pen trembling reveals
Maidens, romantic, the truth must be told,
Knowledge is better than silver or gold;
Then be prepared in the spring-time of health,
Learn to keep house though surrounded by wealth;

Learn to keep house.

THE DIVER'S STORY.

"To be caught in a tight place, with twenty fathoms of water above, and a stillness, as of death about you, a slender cord your only means of communications with those above—to be caught in a tight place, I say, under those circumstances, is about enough to craze a man outright I can tell you sir"—and the old diver leaned back in his chair, and fixed his eyes thoughtfully on the roaring fire before which we were seated—"I can tell you, sir, it's often a toss of a penny with us, when we once get among the timbers of an old wreck, if we ever come to the surface again!

"I remember a pretty tight fix I got into one time when we were diving into the Conqueror, up the Sound, of the Connecticut shore. She was coming in from the Mediterranean, after three years cruise with the 'middies,' and went down in a gale in sight of home, with every soul on board. I was young then, and anxious to be sent down into her, for the sake of the reputation it would give me, for reputation meant money, and money, you see, was the only reason Nettie and I were deferring our marriage. You can understand how matters stood, and how glad I was when in receipt of orders to make the first dive into the old man-of-war.

"The sea was running pretty high as I was carried down in my heavy 'armor' from the deck of the steamer to the float along side, where the ropes by which to haul me up again were fastened on; the india rubber tube, through which I was to be supplied with air, was adjusted, and I stood listening to my final instructions before being put overboard.

"'Now, dear boy,' said my old friend and instructor, Lott, the famous deep-sea diver, who came forward to close the little glass window in my helmet, 'take good care of yourself, and don't stay long below. The currents are swift and treacherous about here, and keep an eye to your ropes, or they'll get tangled. Now, then, good-bye, old fellow, and good luck to you; And with a pleasant smile he closed the glass door before my eyes, and fastened over it the protecting wire netting.

"They bore up in their arms to the side of the float, where the hungry waves were leaping up as though greedily opening their foaming frothy jaws to receive me.

"I dropped into the waves with a splash, sinking softly down through the brilliant sunlit waters, which, though rough and boisterous at their surface, suddenly grew calm as I passed below. I glanced up at the sun, which appeared as a great ball of fire, but, growing smaller and smaller as I sank lower, it finally seemed like the tiny red spark of a candle, and then faded from sight. I noticed that the waters were lit by a pale ghostlish haze, much like the effect of moonlight in a light, drifting fog; but those observation were cut short by my realizing that I was near bottom, and looking below, I found myself over a bank of tall, thick sea-weed.

"Knowing that if I were once entangled in them they would hold me there forever, I pulled the single rope violently, and my descent was checked just as my feet touched the treacherous grasses. The tide bore me slowly along and passed them turning me around again and again in the eddies and making my head so giddy that I was heartily glad when I cleared the bank and stood at last upon the bright sandy bottom. The shells and gravel on the bed of the water were most delicate and beautiful in formation and exquisite in design, but so tender that even shells crumbled at my touch.

"I hurried on with the current until I saw before me what I judged to be the great wooden walls of the Conqueror, but on nearing it I found it to be a reef of rock, fancifully honey-combed from end to end, and in and out among the little arched halls of this fern-covered chambers the fish were chasing each other playfully or hanging idly in the water.

"Passing around these rocks, I came upon a mass of tangled rigging, and a few steps further brought me to the main-of war half buried where she lay, in the drifting sand, her spars and topmasts crushed and splintered upon her decks; her sails and rigging hanging over the side and resting upon the broken bulwarks.

"Great caution was necessary lest I should become entangled among the ropes or caught under the shifting timbers, and making my way slowly to the companion-way, I sent up the signal:

"3—'8—'7—'I am about to enter the vessel'—'I shall be in danger'—Play out rope freely and give me plenty of air.'

"I made my way to the lower deck, and found myself in the forward cabin. It was very dark, and groped about for the doorway, knowing that once in the main saloon, the deck-lights would enable me to see more distinctly.

"Clearing the rubbish and drifting sand from about the doorway, I burst it open, and was about to enter when I paused, to summon courage before entering. A moment and my nervousness was over, I put my shoulder to the door, shoved it back against the waters, and resolutely entered. An awful silence was upon everything—a silence as of death. I was alone, at the bottom of the sea, in the saloon of the Conqueror, and close about me were postured, like grim sentinels set to watch me in my work, the officers and crew of two hundred!

"Yes, there were the fit-fated men there as they stood when death overtook them on that awful night, when they were hurried from their berths on the alarm that they were sinking. Before they could reach the stairway, the mighty water had rushed in upon them, and they died where it had met them at the threshold.

"The eddying waters carried them here and there through the cabin, but still so close were they one to another, that I had to part them now and then to reach the after cabin, and more than one turned, as I slowly passed along, and followed in the wake I made behind me. Their faces close against my helmet, and it horrified me to notice that they all were still upon their features the impression of the terror that had come upon them in death.

"You mustn't think me heartless if I say I went at once to my work, for we divers constantly go through such scenes, and I knew well enough, before I went down, that they were awaiting me there. I felt it as keenly as you would, sir, but I was sent down to do certain things, and I had to start about it at once. Still, I was glad enough when I stood again on deck, ready to go above with my first report, and I gave a good strong pull on the signal-rope.

"A moment passed and I was terrified at receiving no response from a second or a third signal!

"I pulled the rope again violently—waited—still no rely!

"Great Heaven! what did it all mean? Had they forgotten me? Were they to leave me there at the bottom of the sea with that awful crew? I no sooner realized my helplessness than an uncontrollable terror took possession of me, while horrible doubts and fears came crowding into my brain. Surely they would not desert me!—surely they had not forgotten me! I pulled madly at the cord once more, and glancing up perceived that there was something steadily resisting my efforts from the manhead above.

"Was it some monster who was playing with my rope?—some great fish who was holding it in his jaws? In my desperation I threw my whole weight on it, and—it gave way, and fell slowly silently on the deck at my feet. The ragged, frayed ends, which had become entangled in the rigging, were in my hands, and the upper half of the rope had floated far away with the tide.

"I was alone at the bottom of the sea, with no means of signaling my distress! The India-rubber tube, which was my only means of breathing, was yet left to me; but as soon as they should begin to wind in the ropes and tube, on some supposed signal from me, it would snap in two, and the water would come in upon me.

"I need not tell you of the wild terror which took possession of me; you could not appreciate it. I knew the men were close to me—only thirty yards above—yet I must die because I could not reach them! I raved like a mad man, and tried to tear my armor from me, but its iron rivets held me fast. I shouted piteously, useless, lessly, through the waters, my cry going no further than the walls of my helmet. I was beside myself in my awful terror. I tried to pray, but I could not control my maddened brain.

"I fell upon the deck at last, exhausted—in a sinfulness stupor—a sudden despair—and sank into unconsciousness. When I recovered, I was calm—prayer come to my lips, and with it peace and resignation to my heart.

"I closed my eyes quietly, and waited for the death I was powerless to defer. Waited for it with my head laid on my arm. Waiting quietly for its coming, praying God that it might come upon me gently, and asking that I might fall into unconsciousness when it was close at hand.

"Was I crazed? Was I mad, or was this a new torture for me in my last moments? I had laid quiet but a moment when I started up in terror, uttering a cry—a weak, miserable cry, which died on my lips as I sank again on the deck and closed my eyes to a terrible sight before me.

"I had left the cabin door open and freed the imprisoned dead men. One of the dead sailors had floated up to the deck, and, by some horrible chance, the tide bore him directly toward me. Was I to die sure rounded once more by those ghastly sentiments as a death-watch?

He was borne slowly along on the current, his eyes wide open in an awful stare, his arms outstretched, as though to embrace me, welcoming me to the unknown world. I fell prostrate on the deck in my terror, but he floated on slowly, the tide casting him up against me, when he fell at my side.

"I caught him, in my desperation, to fling him from me, but his arms closed tight about me in an iron embrace, and his face was close to mine—the face of old Lott, the diver, who had come down through the waters to save me, and in whose stout arms I was borne up, and carried insensible to the boats above.

"We saw what was wrong right away, dear boy," he said to me afterwards, when the ragged ends of your ropes floated to the surface. There was only one way of reaching you, old fellow, and I can tell you we flew around lively. We had no "bell" to go down to you in, so we just fastened some weights to my feet, and ropes to my feet, and ropes to my arms. I took a rubber mouth-piece between my teeth, and dropped overboard. The water oppressed me fearfully, and I couldn't have stood it more than a few minutes. In that few minutes I found you old fellow, caught you in my arms, and signaled them to haul us up mighty quick. I couldn't have stood it much longer, dear boy, for it was killing me."

"I took his dear hands in mine, and looked into his good honest eyes. With a swelling heart I told him in such words as I could, of my gratitude for his heroic efforts when he came down through the water at the risk of his own life to save mine.'

WHAT ATTRACTS.

It is not your neat dress, your expensive shawls, or your ringed fingers that attract the attention of men of sense. It is your character the study. If you are trifling and fast in your conversation, no matter if you are as beautiful as an angel, you have no attraction for them. It is the true loveliness of your nature that wins and continues to retain the affections of the heart.—Young ladies sadly miss it who labor to improve the outward looks while they bestow not a thought on their minds. Fools may be won by gew gaws and the fashionable showy dresses; but the wise and substantial are never caught by such traps. Let modesty be your dress. Use pleasant and agreeable language, and though you may not be courted by the fop and the fool, the good and truly great will love to linger by your side.

A HAPPY THOUGHT.

That was a timely and beautiful thought expressed by a clergyman at the grave of a lonely little child of four summers, from the garden of whose parents, as they went through to the church-yard, he had plucked a little flower. "Forget me not." When the little coffin was lowered into the grave, the Good man holding up the sweet flower in his hand said:

"I hold in my hand a beautiful flower, which I plucked from the garden we have just left. By taking it from its present home, it has withered; but I here plant it at the head of this grave. It has been plucked from its native garden, and has withered; but it is now transplanted into the garden of immortality, where it shall revive and flourish in immortal glory and beauty."

If those dresses were twice as tight they would wear them. If it were the fashion to carry a barrel of flour on the back of the neck they would do it, or die trying. You couldn't devise a fashion that the women wouldn't meekly follow, from no clothes in the winter, bearskin over coats in the summer.

CAPTAIN WEBB'S GREAT FEAT.

Incidents of his Trip Across the English Channel.

A special to the New York Herald from London says Captain Webb entered the water at 1 o'clock on Tuesday last, and at half past five p. m., was progressing at the rate of twenty strokes a minute, the sea and weather being favorable. He was furnished with ale and beef tea, and again at 8 p. m. with beef tea and beer. After that he rested on his back for a while. At nine o'clock he became troubled with seaweed, and at eleven o'clock he took a draught of cod liver oil. When the moon rose, at one in the morning, some brandy and tea were administered to him. Webb declaring at the time that the swim across was a safe thing.

A TURN IN THE TIDE.

At three a. m., he took some coffee. At this time the tide turned northward, and Webb appeared exhausted. His trainer stripped and held himself in readiness to go to Webb's assistance; but Webb laughingly declined the proffered aid. At this time he was still keeping up a pace of twenty strokes per minute. Fears were entertained that the northern tide drift would throw Webb abreast of Calais sands, as the sequel proved.

PLUCK OF THE SWIMMER.

At 4 o'clock a. m., and four miles further progress, daylight broke. Webb was drowsy, and coffee and brandy were given him. At half past 5 Ridden's buoys were in sight and their position located. At 7 o'clock a westerly breeze sprung up and a chopping sea followed, making the prospect extremely discouraging; but the indomitable pluck of the swimmer never faltered. A small skiff kept on the weather side of Webb, who was now swimming slowly and had just partaken of a brandy straight.

CHEERED BY CALAIS STEAMERS.

Every twenty minutes soundings were taken at eight and ten fathoms. Steamers came out from Calais and steamed alongside the gallant swimmer on the weather side, the sea breaking all the while. Cheers upon cheers went up, and Webb seemed to feel their inspiring influence. He laid a direct course for the Calais Sands, westward of the pier, and at half past 10 a. m., was in shallow water.

WELL AND SAFELY LANDED.

At forty minutes past 10 a. m. the heroic Webb stood on French soil, tired of course, but very shortly recovered. He was conveyed to a hotel in a carriage, rubbed down, put to bed and at 1 o'clock was tranquilly asleep and the doctors had no fears of any serious consequences. Webb naked beats Boyton armored about two hours. The wildest excitement prevails in London, and the press pronounces the swim the greatest physical feat of the century.

GETTING RID OF HER DAUGHTER'S BEAU.

She lives down on Baker street, and she has a daughter about eighteen years old. The old lady retains all her simplicity and innocence, and she don't go two cents on style. The other evening when a splendid catch called to escort the daughter to the opera, the mother wouldn't take the hint to keep still. While helping her daughter to get ready, she asked:

"Mary are you going to wear the shoes with one heel off, or the pair with holes in'em?"

Mary didn't seem to hear, and the mother inquired:

"Are you going to wear that dollar gold chain and that washed locket, or will you wear the diamond father bought at the hardware store?"

Mary winked at her, and the young man blushed, but the old lady went on:

"Are you going to borrow Mrs. Brown's shawl, or will you wear mine?"

Mary bustled around the room, and the mother said:

"Be careful of your dress, Mary; you know it's the only one you've got and you can't have another until the mortgage on this place is lifted."

Mary remarked to her escort that it promised to be a beautiful evening, and as she buttoned her glove her mother asked:

"Those are Mrs. Hardy's gloves, ain't they? She's been a good neighbor to us, and I don't know how you'd manage to go anywhere if she didn't live near us."

Mary was hurrying to get out of the room, when the mother raised her voice once more and asked:

"Did you run into Mrs Jewett's and borrow her bracelet and fan? yes, I see you did. Well, now, you look real stylish and I hope you'll have a good time."

Mary sits by her window in the pale moonlight and sighs for the splendid young man to come and beau her around some more, but he hasn't been seen up that way since that night. The old lady, too, says that he seemed like a nice young man, and she hopes he hasn't been killed by the street cars.

A countryman fell off a ferryboat at Vicksburg, and his wife, waiting coolly until his head showed above the water, shouted: "There, darn yes, I know'd you'd do it! But yer never get out, either!

SWALLOWING FIFTEEN COWS.

'Swallowed fifteen cows!' said Bertie in astonishment, looking up from her play. Her ears had caught the words in a conversation that was going on in the room.

'Yes,' answered her brother; 'he drank them all up.'

'Drank fifteen cows! I don't believe it,' answered the little maiden firmly.

'He sold them, and bought whiskey and beer with the money,' exclaimed her aunt Katy.

'Oh, oh, that was it. I see now. Well, it is funny.'

'No not funny, dear, but sad,' said aunt Katy. 'The man had a wife and two little children, and he sold the milk from fifteen cows and bought them food and clothing. But now having swallowed the cows, as we were saying, his wife and children go hungry and cold, and he, a poor, miserable drunkard, is in the alms-house. Isn't it dreadful to think of?'

The children looked very sober.

'You'll never catch me drinking up fifteen cows, nor one, either,' said George, very positively.

'I don't know as to that,' replied Aunt Katy. 'The man we were talking about was once a little boy like you, with a healthy taste for food and clear cool water. As to ever swallowing a cow, much more fifteen cows, such a thing never entered his head. But you see what he came to at last. How was it? He began by taking a glass of ale or beer, or a little wine at parties now and then. This corrupted his pure taste, and gave him an unnatural thirst which only strong drink could satisfy. After ale and beer come whisky, rum and brandy; and the more and oftener he drank, the more his thirst increased, until he became a poor miserable drunkard. So you see, George, that no man can tell what he may come to. May be, instead of swallowing fifteen cows, you will get down, one of these days after you become a man, forty or fifty cows, and a house into the bargain.'

'Now, aunty, this is too bad!' exclaimed George. 'You know I will not.'

'So hundreds and thousands of little boys might once have said who, now that they are grown to be men, are drunkards. There is only one way of safety.'

'What is that, aunty?' asked the boy, looking up with serious eyes.

'It is the way of total abstinence, as we call it—the only way of safety for boys and men. If you never drink a drop of intoxicating liquor, you will never be a drunkard. If you depart from this rule, no man can say to how low a depth of wretchedness and degradation you may fall. The worst drunkard in the land was once a pure and innocent boy.'

'I'll never swallow even a calf!' exclaimed George, starting up, and speaking with great earnestness.

'Touch not, taste not, handle not the unclean thing,' said Aunt Kate, 'and all will be well with you. But indulge ever so little in drinking, as you grow to manhood, and none can tell into what a great depth of hopeless ruin you may fall.'

WHAT IS THE BIBLE LIKE

It is like a large, beautiful tree, which bears sweet fruit for those that are hungry and affords shelter and shade for pilgrims on their way to the kingdom of heaven.

It is like a cabinet of jewels and precious stones, which are not only to be looked at and admired, but used and worn.

It is like a telescope, which brings distant object and far-off things of the world very near, so that we can see something of their beauty and importance.

It is like a treasure-house—a store-house for all sorts of valuable and useful things, and which are to be had without money and without price.

It is like a deep, broad, calm flowing river, the banks of which are green and flowery, where birds sing and lambs play, and dear little children are loving and happy.

When may young ladies be said to be economical? When they resort to tight lacing to prevent waistfulness.

A good book and a good woman are excellent things for those who know just how to appreciate their value. There are some men, however, who judge of both only from the beauty of the covering.

A love-smitten youth says: Of all the things I do like, this I like the best, to see a pretty lady, and see her neatly dressed. To which an old crusty bachelor says with a grin, how do you like the 'pin back,' or 'tuck em up behind?'

Hillsborough Recorder.

WEDNESDAY..... SEP. 8, 1875.

MAJOR PATTERSON.

The campaign for the vacancy in the Orange delegation is going on quite actively. The thanks of our people are due to Gen. J. M. Leach for the energy and ability with which he has taken up our cause, and for the vigorous blows he has dealt in the canvass. The thanks of the people are also due to Col. Ike Young, for his unsolicited presence in the campaign, based upon the indifference, the ignorance or the corruptibility of the people, ought to do more to rouse them to action than any thing else almost. They will feel the indignity of being regarded as a marketable commodity to be bought up out of the full pockets of the Revenue official, or as ignorant dupes to be swayed by an eloquence specially adapted to the mass of voters of his own party.

Apart from all other consideration, the people of Orange owe it to themselves to turn out en masse to give a fitting testimonial to W. N. Patterson. He it is of the living generation of our county statesman to whom the most is due. It is to his judgment, his financial ability, his firmness and to his integrity that Orange county owes its near release from debt—a release which can be appreciated by those who remember five or six years back, when its credit was low, its prospects gloomy, and its existing burdens so heavy as to be almost intolerable. All is now changed, and public approbation crowns W. N. Patterson as the author of this changed fortune. In whatever position of life in which he has been placed, in whatever relation he has stood, he has been the same, honest, pure, incorruptible, intelligent and sagacious.

Let him be rewarded with the unanimous Democratic vote of the county.

THE ALECK CRAIG LETTER.

We are informed that the letter which appeared in the Recorder two weeks ago, signed by Aleck Craig and announcing himself as a candidate for the Convention, is denounced by certain Radicals as a Democratic trick, and there is some mention made of calling the Recorder to account for it. Let them call. In the Recorder office, will be found the original letter, received by mail from Chapel Hill. We do not know Aleck Craig. But he is no myth. He is known to many. Whether he wrote the letter or not is another question. It has all the marks of authenticity. It was inserted as an advertisement accompanied with a request to forward bill.

We are not surprised at the consternation the letter created in the ranks. Aleck "spoke right out in meeting." He did not wait this time for the white leaders to tell him what to do. He was tired of waiting. He had been fooled long enough, and he let out very plainly the genuine sentiments and expectations of his race before the prudent caution of his white co-adjutors could suppress them.

We thank Messrs Page and Craig for their candor. The white people will know exactly where they stand.

In advance of the Convention, but which will meet before this reaches our readers, we have no speculations to offer in regard to its organization. By rights, the Democrats should have the control, and the recent decision of Judge Settle in the Robeson county case declaring that he has no jurisdiction in the case, removes one of the chief apprehensions of trouble, the Convention being left, and properly, to decide upon the qualifications of its own members.

The Raleigh News says, Gov. Smith, of Georgia, a few nights since was serenaded at Augusta, and made a brief speech in which he alluded to the prosperity of his State. The bonds of the State are now sold at par, and its credit is perfect. A few years since under the Radical Governor, Bullock, its financial condition was that of chaos, and its ruin apparently inevitable. Under white rule and under Democratic management it has recovered, and now stands the financial peer of any State in the Union.

The marks of Radical rule are deeply seared upon the fortunes of North Carolina. It seems impossible to efface them, and so long as the white people of the State consent to work with a party which owes its strength to an ignorant race, they never will mend their condition.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says 'a party must have a very bad cause when through its legislation, it brings misfortune upon the people. That's what the Republican party has done," and it adds that "the people who are suffering propose to express themselves in Ohio this fall." And so have they done elsewhere. Only in North Carolina has the Radical party maintained a respectable foot-hold, and that amid the wreck and ruin caused by its past legislation.

THE BIG BANK FAILURE.

No event of the year has been so startling in its special sphere as the failure of the Bank of California with its immense capital of gold and all its transactions founded on a specie basis. A failure of fourteen millions, all gold, is enough to stupefy those who can hardly conceive of such an amount, or who would suppose that such an amount was impregnable against all the assaults of panic or commercial vicissitudes. Yet the bank has gone down. It only proves that over trading on any basis comes to the same end, and that transactions of fifty or a hundred millions, trusted to the chances of integrity or business capacity, and based upon a capital of not more than a tenth of that amount in gold, are just as sure to come to a fatal issue as if paper money had been the vehicle of business, and paper money the security.

Much is said about Ralston the President of the Bank, the ruin of which drove him to desperation and to suicide. Grand in his conceptions, bold in his enterprises, liberal in his ideas, he stands out one of those splendid examples of active character bringing its possessor from the very depths of obscurity to the most dazzling height of fortune ever attained on this continent. For Ralston was not only the possessor of as much money as any other of the monied magnates of the land, but his money gave him an influence, socially, commercially and politically that no other American ever had. All California bowed to his nod; nothing was done without his participation, and it is just to say that every thing seemed to prosper with his co-operation. Liberal, generous, magnificent, he was the admired, respected, envied of all.

He has paid a fearful price for his success and his elevation. He pushed his fortune too far. He failed, and rushed to a suicide's fate to hide his mortification and his despair.

And then the question occurs, is it not better to court the gifts of fortune by gentle wooing, to reach its heights by gradual steps, rather than by trying to grasp all at one swoop, to fall and to fall forever?

Radicalism is easily pleased, and its benevolence very expansive. Col. Young says in his speech in Hillsboro, that he had no objection to whipping negroes for stealing, but he objected to disfranchising him; in other words, satisfy the ends of justice by inflicting the deserved punishment, but subserve the purposes of Radicalism, by, according to the criminal all the privileges of an honest and true man. Kind and affectionate to the law, and exceedingly benevolent to the Radical party is Col. Young.

The negro insurrection in Georgia was pronounced by the Radical press at the North as a gotten up job by the Democrats to bring the negroes into trouble, as if the white people were not too wise to revive that unhappy state of things from which they have just relieved themselves. The New York Herald, once a doubter, is candid enough to admit that the plan of a formidable insurrection did exist, and that the people of Georgia were right in the steps they have taken. At all events the trials are going on, but with marked fairness, under Judge Herschell V. Johnson.

You need not fear to trust Wm. N. Patterson, a farmer by choice; he knows your wants, and will do all in his power to improve your condition.

To the charge that Jefferson Davis is a coward the Augusta Constitutionalist eloquently replies:

"Coward!' You call him that, gentlemen? The history of the battle of Buena Vista contradicts you. When Col. Bowles and his regiment of Indianians fled like a flock of sheep before Gen. Mignon, or, as your Gen. Shields graphically describes it, the regiment ran like a pack of cowards, with its Colonel at the head. Jeff. Davis and his immortal Mississippians opened ranks and allowed them to pass to the rear, and then closed with the Mexicans in the deadliest conflict recorded in American history. The onset of eight thousand of the enemy, headed by their most gallant leader and fighting under the very eye of Santa Anna, was arrested and hurled back. At the first fire Col. Davis was shot, but he remained in the saddle at the head of his men throughout the culminating moment of that battle and the balance of the day. Had they been successful, Washington's Battery would have been captured, Gen. Taylor's left wing would have been turned his retreat to Saltillo cut off, his army surrounded and made prisoners of war. The Americans army that day was lost by the cowardice of your Col. Bowles, and saved by the lion-hearted Col. Davis.

Coward! There never was a more infamous falsehood. There is not a drop of such blood in his veins.

Walter Thompson can testify to that, he belonged to the 1st Mississippi and shot one of Mignon's buglers.

Vicksburg, Sept. 3.—A riot occurred at a Republican meeting in Yazoo City last night Sheriff Morgan, Republican, made an inflammatory speech. He said the course of the Democrats meant war, and war would be the consequence. A colored man named Robinson rose to speak, and while censuring the Republican officials, voices cried, 'Put him out; he is a Democrat.' Another speaker denounced one of the officials as a thief. The lie was given, and shooting began. About fifty shots were fired. Several persons were wounded, and Richard Mitchell, late Republican candidate for Mayor was killed. Great excitement prevails. Companies have been organized and equipped in the city and county. People are arming. The town is picketed with citizen soldiers prepared for any emergency that may arise. Thus far the trouble has been confined to the Radicals only, but the Conservative whites fearing a negro riot, have armed for self-protection. All roads leading to the town are picketed and the place is now quiet. Among the wounded is W. H. Foote, a prominent negro politician, who will probably die.

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—It is difficult to state the effect of Ralston's (the president of the Bank of California) failure upon his manufacturing enterprises. It is feared the Kimball Manufacturing Company will be unable to stand the shock. The rolling mills are in better condition. The Cornell watch factory will be seriously crippled. The effect on mining stocks cannot be estimated. All the business in that line is suspended.

Ralston is quoted as saying: "I tell you, the failure is the result of a persistent effort for months to break this bank."

The directors applied to Flood & O'Brien on the day of the failure for relief, offering that firm the entire paid up stock of the bank, $5,000 000, also $1,500,000 in the bank and an additional million to be assessed on the stockholders, in all $7,500 000, provided Flood & O'Brien would assume the liabilities of the bank. The proposition was rejected, and the bank was compelled to suspend. There is no doubt the liabilities of the bank will amount to $14,000,000, and the assets are $7,000,000, which will probably shrink before realized.

The stockholders will lose the stock, and to meet the liabilities to noteholders will be compelled to stand an assessment of 50 per cent.

Cincinnati, Sept. 1.—A man named Peterson enticed the daughter of a farmer named Trusty to this city. Trusty followed, and finding his daughter took her home. Peterson followed them making threats against the old man, and last night approached his house. Trusty took a shot-gun, determined to kill Peterson on sight. Trusty's son, aged eighteen learning his father's intention, approached to dissuade him, when the father mistaking his son for Peterson, shot him dead.

Pottsville, Pa; Sept. 1.—Thomas Sanger, an inside boss at the Lehigh colliererry was killed to-day by five strangers. Another man was shot in the bowels, and two others are reported killed. Sanger had trouble with miners a year ago, and since has received coffin letters ordering him to leave the country.

A reward of $1,000 has been offered by Messrs. Heston & Co; for the apprehension of the assassins of Sanger.

The excitement at Girardville and Shenandoah continues unabated. A party of armed men organized to-day and started in pursuit.

Milwaukee, Sept. 1.—Severe storms have washed away the track on the river division of the Milwaukie and St Paul railroad, between St. Peter Junction and Red Wing, and no train has got through since Sunday. It is believed the damage will be repaired to-day.

Harrisburg, PA; Sept. 1.—Dr. J. W. Bechtel and H. G. Walaser, who were found guilty yesterday of attempted abortion, were sentenced to-day, the former to three years and the latter to eighteen months in the penitentiary.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—The election returns to date are meagre, but indicate that the Democrats have elected their State ticket by a large majority. Houghton (Rep.) and Lutterrell (Dem.) are probably elected to Congress in their respective districts, the Third and Fourth. No returns have yet been received from the city precincts.

In the Second Congressional district the fight is between Page (Rep.) and Larkin (Dem.) Tuttle (Ind.) in the same district is much behind his ticket. The impression is quite general that Piper (Dem.) for Congress in this district (the First) is ahead but all speculation as to the result in this city at the present hour are useless.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—A few scattering returns from the city do not furnish any indication of the vote. The Independents are very confident that they have elected most of their city officers, excepting the mayor, which is doubtful.

There are no later returns from the interior.

Louisville, Sept. 2.—The Planters' National Bank, of this city, was robbed of a large amount this morning about daybreak. The teller of the bank, Louis Rehem, was discovered near the bank on the way to the police station. He could hardly speak at first, but after awhile informed the detectives that three men had taken him from his bed during the night and proceeded to the bank, where they forced him to deliver the keys, with which they opened the safe and abstracted the money. Rehem alleges that he was chloroformed and stabbed in the side, where there is a slight wound.

The bank officers refuse to give information regarding the affair further than that depositors will lose nothing. The amount stolen is believed to be nearly $100,000.

New York, Sept. 2.—General Fitzhugh Lee and a party of representative men from Fredericksburg, Va; and adjacent counties, arrived here this morning. They will hold a meeting to-morrow for the purpose of conferring with Northern citizens as to the advantages offered in the neighborhood of Fredericksburg for manufacturing and other industrial enterprises.

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 2.—Yesterday Wm. Dawson, ex colonel of an Indiana regiment while attending a wedding party at Barlow's Hill, having refused admission to six roughs, was stabbed by James Murphy in the abdomen and died in a few minutes. Three hundred persons gathered around the jail last night with the avowed purpose of lynching Murphy, but were prevented by the entire police of the city.

New York, Sept. 2.—Judge Brady, of the Supreme Court, has granted an order of publication on the suit of Drexel, Morgan & Co. vs the California Bank to recover $25,000. gold, on affidavits that the defendant is a foreign corporation, whose president is dead, whose cashier lives in San Francisco, and which has no officer in this city on whom service could be made. The suit is not for deposits, but on circular notes.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—John W. McDonald formerly judge of Harris county, Texas, was arrested to-day by the sheriff of that county upon a warrant issued by Governor Beveridge upon a requisition of the Governor of Texas. The requisition charges McDonald with forgery, but the sheriff says there are several indictments against him.

Legal Talent.—The trial of young Strange for the killing of Murray in Haywood brings in the legal talent of the West. Messrs. Ferguson, and Henry and Welch, of Waynesville, and McLoud and Pullium and James H. Merrimon of Asheville appear with Solicitor Tate, in the prosecution, and Messrs Howell, and Badger of Waynesville, The Davidson, Erwin and Coleman, of Asheville, for the defense.—Asheville citizen.

Let every man in Orange vote on the 16th for Patterson, the people's candidate.

Give Patterson a rousing Vote on the 16th. Let Old Orange speak aloud. Roll up the biggest majority ever given in the County.

Chapel Hill.

We learn that about forty students have entered and more are coming in daily. It is probable that during its first session the number will reach one hundred.

The Rev. C. J. Curtis will commence a mission service at St. Mary's Chapel Episcopal, beginning on next Monday, and continuing through the week. A general attendance is invited.

The Commissioners are in session this week, and will have a busy time for, in addition to their usual monthly work, they take the bonds from the new elected officers. Let them observe the law of the last session of the Legislature, "in regard to the sufficiency of official Bonds."

We learn, that tobacco is ripening up finely, contrary to all the fears expressed of injury by rain. Many planters are cutting and curing and the prospect is very encouraging.

Rainer and Graves' School has now eighty—pupils—a good ly number in these hard times, and evidence of the high reputation of the school.

Farmers need hardly be reminded how important it is to go to work to break up ground for wheat. Let the farmer get out of the slovenly habit of sowing wheat on stock land. If he expects to make good crops he must work for it, nature is not to be trifled with. Remember the scripture maxim, "as ye sow, so shall ye reap." If you sow carelessly, ye shall reap sparingly. But farmers have some how or another got into their heads another scripture maxim, "cast thy bread upon the waters, and after many days it shall return unto thee." Yes, after very many days, if they scatter their seed about upon the hard surface of the ba&d and call it golden corn field; and scratch it under with a one horse [illegible]

A new Enemy to the Bee.

Bee-keepers have been of late troubled with a new enemy in the shape of an insect about the size of, and somewhat resembling the bumble bee, but with longer wings. The insect hangs around the hives in small numbers and attacks the honey bee as a hornet does a fly, seizing it in its antenna, and piercing it with its sting till dead, after which it retains its hold upon the victim until it has sucked it dry of its fluids.

Some farmers have lost heavily and their swarms are nearly destroyed. It is a new pest here.

We have sent specimens brought us by Mr. Saunders Miller to the Agricultural Department at Washington, and hope to obtain a history of the insect for the curiosity, perhaps for the benefit of, our readers.

Hard times and Rainbal Aid.

There has never been a time since the War, since scarcity of money pressed so heavily upon the people. And it is a pressure that nothing but time can relieve. The best men are cramped, while the poor are straitened to the most painful degree. Now is the time to show sympathy, patience and forbearance. The unfortunate trader crippled in his business by the inability to meet his engagements because others were not able to meet theirs, must not be pursued as a criminal, nor oppressed as a defrauder, men can not help themselves now, however honest their intentions.

Therefore forbear with each other, and patiently bide the time when the tide of business shall turn. It cannot be far off, for bountiful crops everywhere must soon start the dried up springs. These financial troubles come in cycles. This one has nearly passed through its course.

Mass Fair.

Orange County has proved her capacity to compete with the best in all the previous Fairs, whether in stock, agricultural products, or specimens of handi work. As the approaching Fair bids fair to be equal to any of its predecessors it is to be hoped that Orange will be equal to the occasion.

There is no doubt the Fair will be a brilliant one. The entries of stock are already large Those of machinery larger than ever; while the Military display and the presence of distinguished men, such as the son of General Lee, will draw many who will be attracted by laudable curiosity.

THE UNIVERSITY.

A meeting of a portion of the Board of Trustees of the University was held at Raleigh on Wednesday of last week. After full deliberation, it was determined not to make any choice of President until the next meeting of the Board in January next.

The conference of the Trustees developed a very satisfactory condition of affairs, and it is believed that the first session of the revived institution will be full of lively encouragement.

TURN OUT.

We do not know that the Republicans have any avowed candidate out for the Convention in Orange except Aleck Craig. Perhaps it is their idea to hold back until the day of election and then rally upon some one under the expectation that the Democrats finding no opposition will be indifferent and not come to the polls. We expect our friends to act under different motives, and as much is expected from them, look to see them come out, opposition or no opposition, and poll the largest vote ever given in the County.

They owe that action to the memory of the lamented statesman, whose vacancy they are called upon to fill. They owe it to the man they have chosen as the successor of their first choice, a man every way worthy of enthusiastic support. And they owe it to themselves, as a rebuke to the unauthorized invasion of a Government officer who presumed to teach the people of Orange their duty, and corrupt them from their fidelity.

Let every Democrat in Orange be found at the polls on the 16th.

Speaking on Wednesday.

Ike Young, on behalf of the Radicals spoke here on Wednesday last. He had the field to himself, no one thinking it worth while to do so, though prominent Democrats were present. We do not understand the policy of silence when Orange County was so impudently invaded by men paid for the service.

However, Young did no harm, for he displayed himself in so many colors, now as an old fashioned Democrat, now as an Old Whig, then again as a modern Conservative that he could get a fast hold on one except on his last character of a Radical, and in that he did get a very fast hold upon—the negroes. He is sure of their vote.

Ike was very solicitous for the whites to vote for the Radical candidate, but wholly opposed to the negroes voting for Patterson. In other words he was anxious for the white man to vote with the negroes, but utterly opposed to the negro going to the white man. Ike Young keeps up the color line, that is he keeps the negro banded together under Radical colors, and invites the white man to rally under them. Not so fast. The white men have their line also, and are going to stand on it.

Dealing with Burglars.

Whether the shooting of burglars is a perfectly legal amusement is a question which has been submitted by one Thomas H. Reilly to that eminent light of the law, Charles O'Conor, Esq; of New York. Mr. Reilly desires to know if the law requires that a burglar shall be challenged before shooting him, even if he be seen in the act of plundering, and also if it is lawful to shoot him on simply seeing him enter one's house at night. Mr. O'Conor expresses the opinion that if you shoot a burglar while plying his avocation "no one will enquire whether all the forms or ceremonies were observed which some ancient law-giver or modern enactment for 'that case made and provided' may have discreetly suggested, whatever may be the strict law applicable to the case; and whatever exact duty might enjoin, no magistrate will commit the slayers to prison, no grand jury will indict them, nor will any district attorney prosecute or petit jury convict. If indeed, any one in this line of official authorities could be found to act adversely, the next in succession would be apt to repudiate his doings; or if a concurrence of the whole could be imagined, ending in a conviction, it is very certain that no Governor would hesitate an instant in awarding to the accused a safe deliverance by his dispensing power."

An Equestrian Goat.

Mr. Robbins, of Rockingham, (who, by the way, is a small Barnum) has among many other curious animals a goat that is in the habit of riding a pony. His goatship is permitted to run at large during the day, being called home in the evening, when he jumps upon a box near where the ponies are fed, from which, of his own accord, he leaps upon the back of a mustang, and stamping her with his feet forces her to move about the lot, after which the pony resumes her place at the trough and "Billy" dismounts and proceeds to join them at supper.

Professor Robbins has quite a collection, embracing ponies, sheep, goats, deers dogs, coons, pigeons, birds, chickens, ducks, &c; and his influence over them is really astonishing. Should he start out this Winter with his menagerie—being of home production—he expects a large patronage.—Charlotte Observer.

June 23. J. R GATTIS.

STATE NEWS.

A watermelon picnic by moonlight was an idea of the Good Templars of Greensboro one night last week, and the way the Patriot talks about the "ringing of the merry peals of laughter," and all that sort of things, make us wish we had had some stock in that picnic.

A thief broke into the store of Mr. R. W. Price of Salisbury, a few nights ago, and stole therefrom $30 worth of goods.

On Tuesday night last four attempts at robbery were made in Wilmington. One of these was successful, when the thief entered a bed room and stole $24 in money.

Elder Mark Bennett, one of the leading Baptist preachers in the East, died at his home in Halifax county on the 15th.

Capt. W. H. Crawford has been selected as the Chief Marshal of the coming Salisbury Fair. It is a wise selection.

A silver pitcher will be awarded to the best drilled military company at the Salisbury Fair.

Thorn, the carpet-bag member to the Convention from Warren county, as our readers will remember, was expelled from the General Assembly last Winter because he is an Athesist and a defamer of God. In all probability objections will be made to his qualifying as a delegate of the Convention for the same reason, and there is a prospect for a lively wrangle over it at the opening of the Convention.

Raleigh has lost two Mayors within a year, Jos. W. Holden having died on the 21st of January last.

Ike Young spoke at Durham, Orange county, on Monday. Gen. Leach was there and took the skin off him.

We learn from the Citizen that Messrs. A. T. & T. F. Davidson, Maj. Erwin and Col. David Coleman, of Asheville, have been retained to defend young Strange.

A large number of persons attended the funeral of Mayor Separk of Raleigh, on Tuesday afternoon. The business houses were closed and the city wore a Sunday aspect.

According to the Raleigh Sentinel, the hands employed in Blackwell's tobacco factory, at Durham, who were getting $1.50 per day, struck work about breakfast time and walked out of the house. Bill Hammitt, as they call him, took the next train for Petersburg and brought up on Tuesday forty picked hands to fill the places of the strikers. And now the strikers are "lonely and sad," and nothing to do.

A terrible murder was committed last week in Cherokee County by a number of negroes upon their own color. They dragged the victim from his bed at midnight, tied him, carried him a considerable distance, cut his throat and then buried him in a mudhole. The murderers were arrested, and confessed that they killed him because he was a witch, and a negro preacher had told them the only way to protect themselves was to kill him and bury him in a mud-hole in the manner they did.

These are the people to make laws for the whites.

A young man named Blalock Bollick hung himself near Hickory last Week without any assigned cause.

Gov. Vance has learned that the handsome gold headed cane, presented to him by the young Jews of Wilmington has come to light in a pawn brokers shop in New York. We hope he will handle it again.

During the return of the procession which accompanied the remains of Mayor Spark of Raleigh to the grave, it was much disturbed by the riotous conduct of a party of negroes who placed themselves in front of the procession, impeding its progress. Maj. Manly sent forward a squad from the Light Infantry, who captured one of the disturbers, and next day acting Mayor Stronach sent him to jail for sixty days.

The Duplin Record has been moved to Goldsboro.

The Bridge across Haw River at the Granite Factory is nearly completed.

Work on the coast turnpike has been commenced at Wilmington.

A dead negro was found in Lovejoys grove in Raleigh on Thursday morning. He had evidently died of disease, and his body placed where it was found, after death. No one is able to give any information, and the man himself was unknown.

Bishop Lyman was last week at Bakersville, Mitchell County accompanied by the Rev. Dr. Buxton and preached to the great satisfaction of his hearers.

Wilmington handled the past year 76,000 bales cotton against 35,000 last year.

The Salisbury Fair this year promises to be unusually attractive, Jefferson Davis has been invited to deliver the Annual Address.

The Milton Chronicle says the planters about Milton have begun cutting tobacco, and says the weed is ripening beautifully notwithstanding the heavy rains.

DIED.

In this place on the 31st inst; after several days illness of pneumonia, Mrs. Polly Murdock, wife of A. C. Murdock. She has been a consistant member of the Presbyterian Church, for a number of years, and died with strong faith in the Lord. Her remains were borne to the Presbyterian Church; where her funeral was preached at 11 o'clock, by the Rev. Mr. Fitzjerald, in a most effecting and appropriate sermon.

In High Point N. C. on the 27th of Aug. 1875 Minnie E. daughter of Wm. A. and Alice Gattis of Raleigh N. C.

Little Minnie was a sweet and interesting link in the home circle on earth. Her stay was short only 2 years and 6 months. May the grace of God comfort the sorrowing parents as they follow her to her bright home in the skies. H.

HAY.

Among the many difficulties with which cotton planters have to contend, is the scarcity of long forage. The blades of corn are, by most farmers, depended upon almost entirely. Good corn blades, popularly called fodder, well cared, without getting wet, make excellent food—for all kinds of stock. The great difficulty is its general scarceness, and the amount of labor it takes to save it. A good hand cannot, or under the present system, will not, properly save much more than one hundred pounds of fodder in a day. In very favorable seasons for curing fodder, more than this amount might be saved; but for ten years together one hundred pounds per day to the hand would be a fair average. With an abundance of fodder to save, it is clear that one hand would not be able to pull and cure enough of fodder to feed a horse and cow during the winter and the horse during the summer. So soon as the cotton commences opening, all hands must go to picking; and the result is fodder is always scarce. In the cotton States but little corn is planted, and the consequence is, when all the fodder is saved, it is not sufficient to meet the the demands of the country.

Experience teaches that stock can do better without corn than they can without long forage of some kind. Aside from the nutriment which is contained in the long forage, it is required by the animal as a stimulant of distention. Any kind of small grain will kill a horse or mule if the animal is fed on nothing else. The animal will lose its appetite, grow weak and finally die. Stock may be fed on too much corn; but it is impossible for them to get too much long forage. Whatever they will eat is enough and no more.

From various quarters of the country there is shipped to the cotton-growing States thousands of dollars worth of hay every year. For this there is no need. The cotton-growing States produce wild grasses in the greatest abundance. The swamps and edges of the branches and creeks produce, spontaneously, vast quantities of grass. In some sections these native grasses grow four of five feet high, and in vast quantities. It is true, that the hay made from these native grasses is not so good as that made from timothy and other varieties of cultivated grasses; but still, all of them make good palatable food for stock. To grow these native grasses costs nothing, and to save them and store them away in barns for winter food for stock, costs a trifle when compared with the price of hay. If the hay made from these native grasses is not good, it is as good as two-thirds of the hay that is annually shipped into the country and sold at exorbitant prices. All that our farmers have to do, in order to avoid the inconvenience and expense of buying hay, is to go into their own fields and cut and cure the grass that is there growing in the greatest abundance.—Yorkville Enquirer.

THE FARM.

No farmer can carry on his business successfully unless he controls it and if he cannot control it, he ought to embark in something else. He should know that his mules and horses are in their stables before dark, and that they are under a strong lock. He should know that his corn and fodder and the like, are under good shelter and safely locked therein. He should know how many hogs he has, that they are fed what he can afford to spare them, and that they eat it without the assistance of anybody else's hogs. He should know that "there is a place for everything and everything in its place." He should know that his fences are kept up, gates closed, and premises strong enough to keep stock out. He should know that his tenements are kept intact—no rails, boards, palings or planks burned. He should know of whom he borrows and to whom he lends, and the dates of both. He should know what he spends, what he receives, what he makes and what he loses. He should know that a good wife is the best partner he can have. He should know that his reaping is as his sowing, his life as he makes it, his fortune as he shapes it. Do this and he will be happy.

FARM LIFE VS. PUBLIC LIFE.

The Hon. A. G. Brown of Mississippi, gives this excellent advice to young men:

"Be a farmer! There is a fascination in office which beguiles men; but be assured my young friends, it is the fascination of a serpent, or to change the figure, it is the ignis fatuus which coaxes you on to inevitable ruin. I speak of that which I do know, and if my young friends will be governed by the advice, I have this to say, after all my success as a public man, now when my head is blooming for the grave, of all pursuits in life, that of a farmer is the most respectable. It may have its trials and disappointments; so do all others. The mechanic may lose the wages of his labor, the professional man all his fees, the editor may lose the wages of his toil, but the honest, industrious farmer is certain of a return for his work. True Paul may plant, and Apollos water, but God must give the increase. But where is the faithful cultivator of the soil, God's heritage to man, who ever yet suffered for bread?

THE CHEAPEST MANURE KNOWN.

Dr. Daniel Pope, in the Nashville Union and American, says that land plaster (Gypsum) is the cheapest manure known to him, and he has been a careful observer of its effect for sixty years. He adds that it has been in use in this country for forty years, since Franklin wrote his name in sowed plaster, brought from Paris to Philadelphia, which had such a fertilizing effect that all could read his name in clover and lucerne. He refers to a locality in the State of New York, where it has been used for fifty years, and though containing no ammonia or nitrogen in any form; no potash, no magnesia, both of which exist in all crops; no phosphoric acid, yet many upland fields were more productive in 1874 than in 1824, after the removal of fifty harvests, receiving in return less than seventy-eight pounds per acre of a true sulphate of lime a year, and never any other fertilizer. Can the learned Doctor give the rationale of it?—Rural Carolinian.

CANVASSERS wanted for two superb works of French art, "Little Rosamond and her Pets" and the pretty pair, "The Dinner and the Nap." These pictures are worthy of a place in costly homes and inexpensive enough for the simplest. A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste!

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875.

EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

A Magnificent Conception, Splendidly carried out.

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people to the merits of the subject, but rather a lack of proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the ephemeral or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, high, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the finest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of The Aldine will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, The Aldine is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times the cost; and then, there is the Chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of The Aldine, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with The Aldine, is an important feature and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of The Aldine is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"MAN'S UNSELFISH FRIEND."

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed to true the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten. Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all The Aldine pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

1 Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE 1 year, the Chromo and the Art Union, $5.00 per annum, in advance.

No charge for postage.

Specimen Copies of The Aldine, 50 cents.
